

ABSTRACT

Systems, methods, computer-readable medium, graphical user interfaces, print drivers, and other embodiments associated with processing print requests is provided. In one example system, the system comprises a print delay logic configured to delay processing of print requests until a selected print request is claimed. An input device can be configured to receive a claim request from a user desiring to claim one or more print requests, the claim request including charge account information. An identification logic can be configured to identify one or more print requests for which the user is an owner based, at least in part, on the claim request, and can be configured to cause the identified one or more print requests to be processed. A payment logic can be configured to charge an account using the charge account information from the claim request.